WASHINGTON, AUGUST 18, 1880.

FOR PRESIDENT,

JAMES A. GARFIELD,

of Ohio. FOR VICE-PRESIDENT,

CHESTER A. ARTHUR, of New York.

THAT SOLID SOUTH. In Virginia the democratic party is divided upon every local and federal candidate from elector to constable. In Georgia. ufter five days of bitter contest, the democratic convention last week adjourned without making a nomination for governor, and the two factions under Colourt and Nonwood have entered upon what promises to be the most exciting struggle ever witnessed in the state. There are also independent candidates for state treasurer, and in five of the congressional districts there are two democratic candidates, and in one district there are three. In Tennessee the party is nearly equally divided between so-called debt payers and repudiators. No more bitter fight has ever taken place between opposite parties than is now being waged in Tennessee between these two democratic factions, each with its candidate for gov-

Here are three democratic states of the "solid" south in which intestine war rages with more than partisan fury, and yet for HANCOCK the democrats will return them ns "solid."

If like troubles agitated the republican party in Penusylvania, Ohio and Illinois, they would be considered as fatal to success in November. Why the difference? Simply because the south is now solid without reference to how the votes are put into the ballot box. Political work, so far as federal officers are concerned, is simply a matter of record. The democrats can afford to quarrel in local matters, because the electoral vote will be cast irrespective of votes.

This will not always be so. After the democratic defeat now certain in November. the factions in the south will lose confidence in the northern democracy as allies of value. They will hasten to form new alliances, and there is reason to hope we shall never again be obliged to formulate the political battle upon Mason and Dixax's line. The solid south will disappear and with it the necessity for a solid north.

BUSINESS INTERESTS AND POLITICS. Aside from the preponderating influence of the representatives of the repudiating time to plug up the holes that are knocked of the south which will in the bottom of their boat by running May's landing disaster, disclosed a very startundoubtedly continue to direct and con- upon the snags of lies that they have ling bit of information, which explains fully trol the democratic party, the numerical planted along their own channels. It is all the terrible accident in the searching cross weight of the greenbackers in its ranks, the they can do now to keep from sinking, and examination to which Engineer Aitkin of the large number of its most popular leaders who are committed to the theory of unlimited issues of greenbacks, are elements which, together with the generally low tone of intelligence in a majority of the party leaders, constitute forces that hold the better element of the organization as in a vise and bind the democracy if they should obtain ecatrol of our affairs to immediately put into practical operation the wildest and most dangerous theories of fluance and taxation. The paucity of men of brains and training in the democratic party, men who are alive to the absolute necessity of maintaining a sound currency, could not fail to create apprehension in intelligent business circles if the election of a democratic president were thought to be a possibility. Especially would this be the case at the present time, when the candidate to that high office is a man totally ignorant of public and priwate business, without a single idea that he could formulate in his letter of acceptance upon the all-important topic of currency and finance-a man who expressly says he has no policy of his own upon this or other public questions, and who admits with the most charming naivete that he will approve of all legislative measures passed by his party in congress. What a contrast is this man to TILDEN! Totally unscrupulous as the latter was, he had the views of a statesman upon finance, and was not so emasculated of opinion that he dare not express it. For instance, the assertion that he would veto all legislation favoring payment of fraudulent or unconstitutional southern war his recreasey to principle does not seem to of truth: "General Garfield says the negroes the intense hatred which the south bore toward him ever since.

Mr. BAYARD is absolutely the only democrat of prominence who is thoroughly conwinced of the importance of a sound currency, and who has invariably stood firm against his party's dishonest fluancial theories and legislation. Every vote taken in either house of congress last session (when the party was on its best behavior) every move that was made, every speech (except some of Mr. BAYARD's) that was delivered by the democrats in congress is damning proof of the inherent and i neradicable tendency of that party to dishonesty in fluancial legislation and of the inevitable yielding of the better element of the party to the overwhelming influence of the main body. The refunding of the public debt, one of the plainest and most practical menaxees of public economy ever presented to a legislative body, was trifled with, obmirrorted and evaded, and the so-called principles of the grosuback party openly austained at the last session of congress. The platform of the greenbackers in Maine, and upon which the coalition candidates stand, is, word for word, identical with the that nothing but the hardest kind of work republicas fold and is out strong for Gardeld. resolutions of Mr. Whaven of Iowa, which and plenty of it can win this battle. He is very careful not to say that the other version, from which the Tribune has so generously quoted, is false in any particular. What does "personal indorsement" mean? What does it mean when a congressman makes a speech in the house when he is excited, carefully trims it when he is cool and prints it as the same in the Record? That is "personal indorsement."
